

B-29S BURN OUT HEART OF TOKYO

Plane Production Drops But Nips Will Not Notice It

JAPS WILL GET TWICE AS MANY BOMBS AS NAZIS

Congressman Predicts Heavy Blasting During Next Twelve Months

OUTPUT CUT 45 PERCENT

B-29s Will Carry Load Of Sinking Rising Sun; Production Upped

WASHINGTON, May 26—Army plane production took a sharp, planned nosedive today but it was not good news for Japan.

A well-informed congressman said the land of the Rising Sun would be plastered during the coming 12 months with more than double the weight of bombs the Allies dumped on Europe in the last year of the war there.

The congressman, Chairman J. Buell Snyder, D., Pa., of the house subcommittee on war department appropriations, told reporters after an all-day closed meeting with Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall:

"You can say that in the coming year more than two and a half times as many tons of bombs will be dropped on Japan as the Allies dropped in Europe last year."

Snyder did not elaborate. However the Army's announcement of plans for a 45 per cent slash in its plane output during the next 18 months also made it clear that the giant B-29 superfortresses would carry much of the burden of the reduction of Japanese armed might.

The Army said that while many plane types will be cut back and even eliminated production of B-29s would increase for several months. After that production will be held at a sustained high rate.

B-32 On Way Out

The still shadowy B-32 "Dominator" superbomber, which had been expected to take its place alongside the B-29, apparently is destined to fade entirely out of the picture. Its production will be cut back sharply and ended at the end of the year.

Big sister of the B-24 Liberator bomber, the "Dominator" has never been reported in action. Its sudden curtailment seemed to indicate that after some degree of production it had unexpectedly proved unfit or uneconomical for use in the Japanese war.

There have been other, even bigger superbombers reported in various stages of development. To date, however, there has been no official indication that any of them were far enough along to be used in this war.

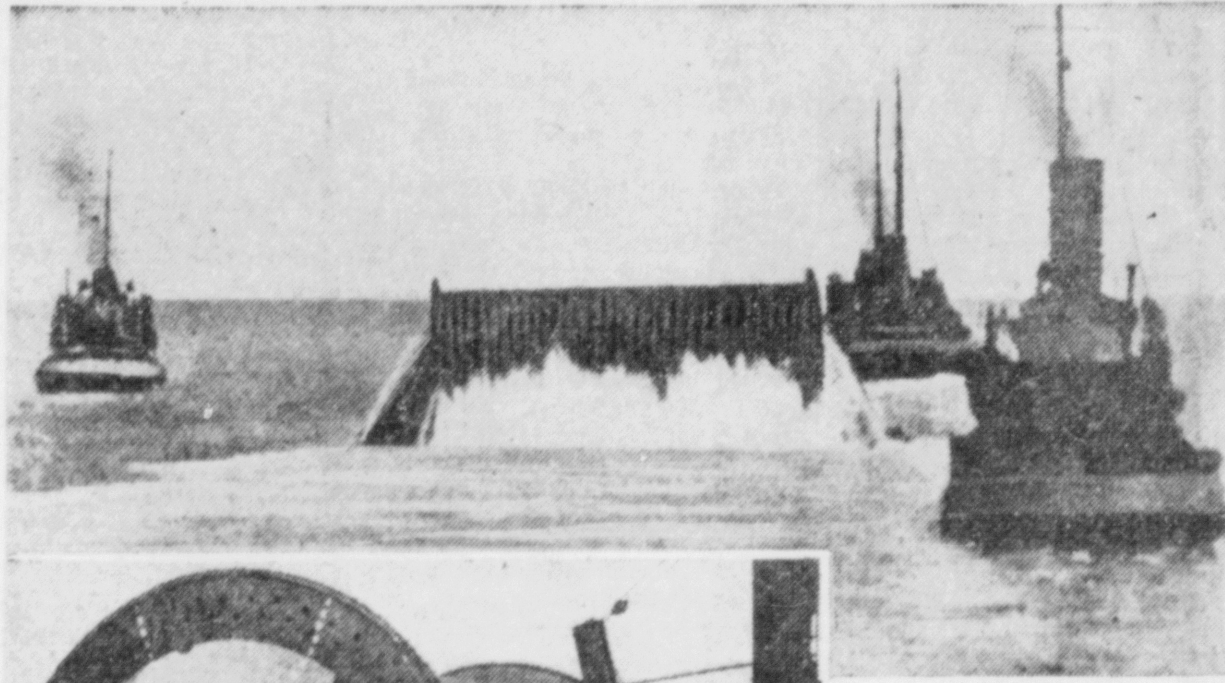

17,000 Planes Cut Out
The Army's announced cutback will eliminate a total of 17,000 planes from production previously planned for the next 18 months. (Continued on Page Two)

SECRETS OF 'OPERATION PLUTO' NOW REVEALED

PICTURED is one of the war's top secrets, a major factor in victory—the laying of pipelines across the English Channel to feed oil to our war-front on the Continent. Tugs (top) tow a drum unreeling 70 miles of welded 3-inch pipe, and (bottom) a drum stands idle—90 ft. long, 50 ft. thick, 1600 tons loaded. Long prepared, begun after D-Day, the work went on until twenty lines were laid and a million gallons a day were flowing to our armies as far inland as Frankfurt-on-the-Main in Germany. Big Power Arguments Over Yalta Vote Formula Delays Conference Work

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26—Great Britain sought big four concurrence today in a proposal to soften the Yalta voting formula but was meeting stubborn resistance from Soviet Russia and the United States. Big four inability to agree on how to put in writing an interpretation of that formula—especially where and when the big power veto would apply—was delaying United Nations conference progress on the last major issue. It threatened to prolong the conference beyond the tentative adjournment target—the first week of June.

Great Britain stands firmly with the other big powers against revision of the wording of the Yalta voting formula. But Britain alone among the big powers is willing to soften the effect of the veto through a liberal interpretation of the formula. The British would like to see these three early steps by the council expedited from the veto and determined by simple majority vote:

1. Decision to "investigate" a dispute—short of setting up a special investigating commission.
2. Determination that "continuance" of a dispute is "likely" to endanger world peace.
3. Decision to "call upon" parties to settle their dispute by peaceful means.

The United States and Russia oppose such "weakening" of the formula. Some of the U. S. delegates, however, do not like the voting formula anymore than the British but consider it a commitment that they must fulfill. They also are concerned about U. S. senate reaction if this country's ability to veto security council action is weakened. China (Continued on Page Two)

LOCAL SOLDIERS COMPLETE TRIP AROUND WORLD

After two and one-half years of separation the parents of S/Sgt. Walter May and Sgt. Montford Kirkwood will celebrate reunion with their soldier sons.

Mrs. George May, East Franklin street, received a telegram Saturday from Sgt. May that he had landed in New York Friday and would be home in a week. Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Kirkwood, North Court street, received a telephone call from Sgt. Kirkwood. He told them that he had just arrived in New York and would be home shortly. Both Sgt. May and Sgt. Kirkwood will come through Camp Atterbury and have a 30-day furlough at home. They left the United States two and one-half years ago from San Francisco. They have travelled all around the world and returned to the States through New York.

NENNI ARREST POSES PROBLEM

Italian Leader Scheduled To Take Place In New Government

ROME, May 26—The allied commission here received word today from Milan that Pietro Nenni, Socialist party secretary arrested by military authorities for addressing a public gathering, will not be tried and the incident is considered closed.

The information contradicted earlier reports from fourth corps headquarters in north Italy that Nenni would face a military government court on Monday. He had been released on his promise not to make any more speeches without permission.

Nenni was arrested yesterday on orders from the joint Anglo-American allied military government for violating their rules by making a speech to a gathering of laborers at Vercelli.

His arrest, on the eve of the formation of a new Italian government, threw a bombshell into the already explosive Italian political situation. Nenni was supported by the three leftist parties for premier of the new government, and even right-wing leaders conceded he would become at least minister of interior.

Probably the most important immediate effect of Nenni's arrest will be to postpone the resignation of Premier Ivanhoe Bonomi. The best information was that he had decided to resign on Monday. But that was before the Nenni incident.

Italian political circles considered the Nenni case a test of how far Allied military authorities would interfere in Italian internal politics. (Continued on Page Two)

ELECTION MAY NOT HOLD UP BIG 3 MEETING

Churchill States British Voting 'Must Not Delay' Allied Meeting

TO CONFER WITH DAVIES

Prime Minister Names His 'Caretaker' Government; Eden Retained

LONDON, May 26—Prime Minister Churchill said today that Britain's general election must not delay "even for a day" a meeting of the big three.

Churchill said he had informed President Truman that the election must not be permitted to interfere with arrangement for a conference between them and Premier Stalin on pressing international questions.

He made known his note to the President in opening his campaign for reelection to parliament in the election July 5. It had been feared that Churchill would hesitate to participate in a big three conference before the election results had been announced in late July.

"If I had to leave the country for such a meeting, I hope you will make sure that I don't suffer for it," Churchill said at Loughton, the third stop of his whirlwind tour of his constituency in the northeastern residential outskirts of London.

He was scheduled to confer with Joseph E. Davies, Mr. Truman's special envoy, at the prime minister's country estate, Chequers, over the week-end. It was believed they will discuss plans for the big three meeting and questions connected with the Allied control commission for Germany.

Churchill described President Truman as "the successor to Mr. Roosevelt with whom I have constant and cordial relations."

He told his constituents that he would not be among them as much as he liked in the future because of urgent international matters. (Continued on Page Two)

SOVIETS ACCUSE CATHOLICS OF PRO-NAZI ACTS

By United Press
Radio Moscow accused the Vatican today of a "marked increase" in pro-German activity.

The charge was made in a broadcast blaming "reactionary Catholic circles" for trying to promote a return to power of former German chancellor Heinrich Brüning.

The Moscow broadcast, heard by the FCC, said:

"In the pope's Christmas message, in which he came out in defense of the rights of the conquered, that is, in defense of Hitler Germany, the Vatican's pro-German activity showed a marked increase."

"Pope Pius, in calling for mercy and a more forgiving attitude, had not a word to say about the responsibility of those who had inundated the world with blood and carried out the most monstrous of crimes."

Another Sharp Cut In Size of Army May Come—If Russia Fights Japs

WASHINGTON, May 26—Members of congress told the United Press today there was a possibility of another sharp reduction in the size of the Army reasonably soon.

The revelation was made following an all-day secret meeting of the house subcommittee on War department appropriations with Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall.

Committee members said the possibility of a reduction in the size of the Army was based on the chance that Russia would enter the war against Japan. In that event, they said, the United States would need less men in the Pacific.

All insisted, however, that Marshall did not discuss with the committee the possibility of Russia's entry into the war against the Japanese. Russia is now militarily at peace with all nations.

Committee members also indicated that the remainder of the Pacific war would be a longer, more grueling struggle than many expect and that Army costs would not be reduced greatly next year. They said Marshall did not submit the war department budget for the 1945-46 fiscal year, but that it might be from 10 to 20 per cent under the current year's $49,000,000,000.

This countered speculation that the new Army budget might be as much as one-third below current spending.

Transportation requirements and increased production of bombs mean that Army spending will go on at a heavy rate, committee members said.

Should the Army be able to reduce its size, they said, there still would be a little reduction in spending because money used to pay personnel would be diverted into mustering out pay and other incidental costs.

MOST OF JAPAN CAPITAL LAID WASTE BY RAID

Emperor Hirohito's Palace Burned Out, Nips Say In Report On Havoc

'SCORCHED TO GROUND'

Jap Broadcasters Go All Out In Describing Damage To City

By United Press
The Japanese said today that an American Superfortress fire bombing burned out the heart of Tokyo, including Emperor Hirohito's palace, and "laid waste" most of the rest of the capital.

A 70-mile-an-hour wind was said to have spread the flames.

Japanese broadcasters splurged on superlatives in describing the havoc wrought by 500 superfortresses early today, Tokyo time. Their note of desperation indicated this was Japan's blackest day of the war.

Okinawa dispatches said the Japanese appeared to be pulling out of Naha, capital city of the island bastion south of Japan. Lt. Gen. Simon B. Buckner's 10th "army" marines seized a sixth of wrecked Naha, and the showdown battle for the island evidently revolved around Shuri, ancient fortress anchoring the center of the looping line across south Okinawa.

Japanese air forces, struggling desperately to stem the American drive on Okinawa, lost 111 planes in heavy attacks on the U. S. fleet off the island and strong points ashore Thursday night and Friday.

Kamikaze, or suicide planes, damaged 11 U. S. light naval units in the burst of activity which boosted to 3,581 the number of Japanese planes destroyed since March 18 in the Okinawa and related operations.

Off Borneo, the battle of Tarakan flared up anew after a relative lull which followed the landing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Australian and Dutch troops. The Japanese were caught in the central Tarakan hills and were fighting a desperate and primitive battle.

In the Philippines, guerrillas now fighting as the Philippine army captured Infanta east of Manila and completed the conquest of the Dinahican peninsula. The U. S. 32nd division in northern Luzon drove within three miles of the Santa Fe, and the 43rd division mopped up in the Ipo Dam area northeast of Manila.

Australia announced the end of the battle for the Weewak area of New Guinea. Some 10,000 Japanese troops, left behind to wither on the vine when MacArthur's forces pushed on to the Philippines, were reported sealed off, and all the British New Guinea coast was under Allied control.

British forces mopping up north of Rangoon in Burma captured Mokshitwa, northeast of Pegu. With the Burma campaign in its final phase, skirmishing was reported in a number of sectors. The fire bombing of the heart of Tokyo completely overshadowed all other activity in the Pacific. (Continued on Page Two)

POLICE HUNTING DOG BITTEN BY RABID ANIMAL

A white Spitz dog is being sought by the Circleville police. The dog was in a fight downtown Thursday with another dog which was killed by the police. The dog which was killed was found to have been rabid when examined by the State department of Health Friday.

Persons are warned against the white Spitz and police wish to have it reported if it is seen anywhere in the city. The dog which was killed and found to be rabid was owned by Richard Boltenhouse, Police Chief W. F. McCrady said.

JAPS WILL GET TWICE AS MANY BOMBS AS NAZIS

By weight, there will be a 30 per cent cut in the last half of this year from production in the first half. Another 10 per cent will be lopped off during the first half of 1946 and an additional five per cent during the remaining portion of next year.

This 45 per cent total deduction, which will affect three fighter planes, three bombers and three cargo planes, will touch virtually every city in the nation manufacturing planes.

Many Out of Jobs

The Army gave no indication of how many employees would be thrown out of work by the cutback. But it was certain to cause grave concern to President R. J. Thomas of the United Auto Workers (CIO) who left here last night for the west coast.

Thomas' union, the nation's largest with over 1,000,000 members, has one-third to one-half of its membership working in aircraft plants.

Thomas, here during the past two days for talks with government officials on plans for keeping employment at high levels during cutbacks, told reporters he had heard nothing to change his opinion that there is inadequate preparation to prevent mass unemployment.

He said he planned to confer next week in Oakland, Calif., with West Coast industrialist Henry J. Kaiser who, Thomas believes, plans to acquire many government war plants throughout the nation as soon as they are sold as surplus.

Thomas indicated he hoped Kaiser would be able to jump into the breach caused by war contract cancellations quickly enough to provide jobs for some of the UAW's many members who will be thrown out of jobs by cutbacks such as the Army plane reduction program.

The Army said lower requirements for a one-front war and lend-lease curtailments made its plane slash possible.

3 Fighter Planes Cut

The cutback affected three fighter planes, the P-38, P-63 and P-80; three bombers, the B-24, B-25 and B-26; and three cargo planes, the C-47, C-54 and C-55.

Emphasis will be placed on one super-bomber, the B-29, instead of two, while long-range fighter and cargo ships suitable for the Pacific war will remain in large production. These were not specifically mentioned in the Army announcement but obviously were the P-47 Thunderbolt and P-51 Mustang fighters and the C-54 and C-55 long range transports.

RED CROSS WORK DRAWS PRAISE

Camp And Hospital Council Thanked For Decorating Room At Lockbourne

Appreciation of the work done by members of the camp and hospital council of the Pickaway chapter of the American Red Cross is expressed in a letter from military personnel at Lockbourne Army Air Base.

The letter, announced following the regular monthly meeting of the chapter, thanks the women for the new window drapes, new furniture covers, furnishing of paint for the walls and the personal arrangement of furniture in the "day room" of Squadron C at the base.

Mrs. James P. Moffitt, chairman of the committee, reported that two davenport and five chairs brought here from the base had been thoroughly cleaned and recovered. Mrs. G. G. Campbell cut and fitted the material and the following women did the sewing and also went to Lockbourne and completely renovated the day room of Squadron C: Mrs. Frank Turner, Mrs. James Carpenter, Mrs. E. O. Crites, Mrs. Roy Good, Mrs. Frank Webb, Mrs. Charles Smith, Mrs. Gladys Wiggins, Mrs. Christian Schwarz, Mrs. W. L. Mack, Mrs. Myrtle Good Korn, Mrs. Helen Caldwell, Mrs. Moffitt, Miss Mary Heffner and Miss Florence Dunton.

Mrs. Moffitt also reported the donation of 40 phonograph records by the Business and Professional Women's club, Mrs. W. F. Heffner and Mrs. George L. Crites. May baskets, made by Girl Scouts, were taken to the base hospital to be placed on supper trays. Fifteen dozen cookies were sent to the hospital by Logan Elm Grange. Each month one of the county granges furnishes cookies for the hospital. Mrs. Moffitt announced the Pickaway County Garden Club had voted $3.50 for seeds for the base.

Mrs. Clark Will, reporting for the volunteer special service committee, said the training program is in progress and members have signed for definite hours in the chapter room.

Reporting for the Junior Red Cross, Mrs. Cleon Webb said $100 had been sent to the national children's fund. This money was raised by the children of Pickaway county. The latest project of the fund is to provide medical kits for distribution to the schools in the newly liberated countries. Mrs. Webb reported that 2,500 kits have been purchased, each of which is equipped to supply the medical needs of 400 children for at least three months.

ties. In Milan, Italian politicians called it "a new type of allied intervention."

There was considerable speculation whether allied authorities would take any action against Palmiro Togliatti, Communist leader, who addressed workers at Novara, 25 miles west of Milan. So far he had not been reported under arrest, although he apparently had violated the same rules as Nenni.

Nenni and Togliatti were among six Italian political leaders, who made a tour of north Italy to sample public opinion on the new government to be formed. All the others returned to Rome yesterday, but the two leftist leaders said they had more work to do in the north. Before the party left Rome, they reportedly agreed to a stipulation not to address public gatherings.

FIVE PICKAWAY BANKERS ATTEND DISTRICT MEET

Five Pickaway county bankers attended the Fourth Federal Reserve district soil conservation meeting held in Lancaster Thursday evening. Phil S. Eckert, agricultural economist for the Federal Reserve bank, sponsored the meeting which was attended by Clark Will and Clarence Barnhart, Circleville bankers; W. E. Lamb and Miller Beckett, Commercial Point bankers; and H. W. Campbell, Williamsport banker.

The meeting was arranged to acquaint and develop factual information about soil conservation. Particular emphasis was stressed on the application of lime and its financing. "In the post war farm readjustment bankers and farmers have a common interest," Mr. Eckert said. "The Fourth District has an almost universal need for lime. Eckert told the 30 farmers and bankers from Pickaway, Hocking and Fairfield counties who attended the meeting, this need has set the stage for a widespread action between farmers and bankers."

Big Power Arguments Over Yalta Vote Formula Delays Conference Work

doesn't like it either but thinks the Yalta formula should be given a trial.

The U. S. position is that no nation by itself should be able to prevent a dispute being brought to the council or to prevent thorough council discussion of it; but the U. S. believes the big powers should have a veto over further steps.

Several drafts of the big four position on this delicate question have been made. It will, when completed, be an answer to the 22 questions on the voting formula posed early this week by the little nations.

The question of more power for the assembly is also "struck." It is linked indirectly with the big power veto. The little nations realize they cannot win much of a concession from the big powers on the voting formula so they seek to expand the powers of the assembly. The major issue now is on a proposal that would give the assembly power to discuss any matter within the sphere of international relations which affects world peace. The Russians say that's too much.

The little nations lost another point in committee last night by a narrow margin. The issue was whether the assembly should be able to request the council to give reports on matters before it and reasons for decisions taken. The vote was 21 to 13 in favor, but short of the two-thirds necessary for approval.

Then he placed his arm around his wife, who stood beside him in an open car, and said:

"If I am called away by other duties and tasks, she will take my place. You will come to her and you will ask her all the awkward questions."

Only last night, Churchill announced a caretaker cabinet that will govern Britain with him pending the general election.

Churchill scheduled eight appearances within five hours in the constituency which elected him to commons, suburban Woodford in Essex on the northeast outskirts of London. The prime minister was due to make a brief, street-corner speech at each stop.

So far the revolting liberals had failed to name anybody to oppose Churchill, but nominations are open until June 25.

Despite the "caretaker" tag put on the cabinet named last night, observers felt most of the appointments would stick if Churchill won his fight for reelection.

The new ministers will receive their seals of office on Monday from King George VI. They will not take oaths, but the traditional rite of kissing the king's hand will be observed.

When commons meets on Tuesday, the resigned liberals of the cabinet — such political stalwarts as former deputy prime minister Clement Attlee, ex-labor minister Ernest Bevin, and others — will take their benches across the hall as opposition to the government.

Bevin's place in the new cabinet was taken by serene, detached Richard A. Butler, a marked contrast to the sometimes turbulent Bevin who liked rough and tumble debate. Butler was minister of education, and as such rode the famous education act through parliament.

Attlee's deputy prime minister's job was abolished in the new cabinet, as were the wartime ministries of security and economic warfare. Lord Woolton, as lord president of the council, fills Attlee's other post.

Anthony Eden, as expected, remained as foreign minister, assuring a continuance of the sort of foreign policy he has fostered since 1940.

Churchill's chief boast was for Brendan Bracken, who moved up from minister of information to first lord of the admiralty, replacing A. V. Alexander. With the royal navy lining up for the showdown battles against Japan, the post was considered a highly important one and a nice plum for Bracken.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, who has been on the back benches since he quit the war office in 1940, re-emerged to become minister of national insurance. Harold MacMillan, who as British minister resident at Allied headquarters in Algiers figured in the dealings with Darian, became minister of air, replacing Sir Archibald Sinclair.

Churchill apparently had abolished his "war cabinet" of eight key ministers. His announcement anese attempted to push the Americans into the sea and the deadly, nerve-sapping second Battle of Bougainville resulted. The crack Japanese sixth division was routed after losing 7,000 men in four fanatical charges against the 37th.

There was comparative lull in the fighting during the months that followed as the Ohio division defended its positions against sporadic Japanese infiltrations and completed a new training program which fitted it for the still bigger battles to come.

It was on Jan. 9, 1945, the battle-hardened Buckeyes landed on Lingayen gulf on Luzon and spearheaded the promised return of Gen. Douglas MacArthur to Manila. The 37th abandoned its jungle tactics in favor of an even more deadly warfare—street fighting.

The battle was tenacious and costly—the Japanese alone lost 12,000 soldiers—but Manila was liberated.

Peace came to Manila but not to the 37th. The division moved into the mountains of northern Luzon in conjunction with the 33rd division and liberated Baguio which had become an anchor in the enemy's defense line.

When news of Germany's surrender was announced, the 37th again was in action—this time near Baletta pass, the southern gateway to the Cagayan valley and Luzon's northern coast. Some of its veterans will come home now. But others will carry on—clear to Japan.

cific war theater. The Japanese made it manifest that American planes had dealt a staggering blow to the city that once was the third largest in the world.

One broadcast said Tokyo was "literally scorched to the ground." Others reported that the central business area, where many government quarters are situated, was virtually razed.

The Japanese premier called an extraordinary session of his cabinet. He issued a statement deploring the damage to the Imperial palaces, and there was a hint that the government might be "renovated."

An official accounting of the raid's results awaited reconnaissance pictures. But there was no doubt that it was effective. One of the airmen who flew over the city was willing to wager 100 to 1 that "Hirohito's home ain't there today."

Mrs. George Davis, Columbus was a visitor in Circleville Friday.

LOST GERMANS

PRESENT-day Germans, between the ages of 22 and 30, are a lost generation, says Pastor Martin Niemöller, a famous religious leader. The only hope for them, he thinks, is "a long period of controlled reeducation." And he thinks such an undertaking should start with "a thorough policy of truth-telling about Nazi policies and practices."

Never in history, perhaps—and certainly never in modern history—has a great national group been so indoctrinated with belief in "things that ain't so" as has the generation of young Germans that grew up under the system of life and thought operated by Adolf Hitler in Germany. Pastor Niemöller thinks, however, that there is some hope in applying sane and realistic instruction to Germans still under the age of 22.

Much can be learned from the great Hitler experiment in shaping human minds.
The most important of them is to avoid Hitler's methods, and not teach "things that ain't so," or things which the common judgment of decent people for ages have known to be evil.

HOME-COMING

WHEN 65 big, silvery bombing planes rolled into Bradley Field, in Connecticut, the other day, returning from Europe, it was a very human sight for a military outfit. Men and dogs and equipment poured out in a stream. There were hundreds of pilots and crewmen and German officers' swords and duffle bags and para-chutes and coveralls and dress uniforms, and enlisted men moving toward the Pacific. But the real sight was the way those thousand men behaved. A correspondent says:

"They hugged their airplanes, kissed the ground, pounded each other on the back. One little sergeant, dancing merrily under the wing of his plane, screamed, 'Get me home to Michigan or I'll go crazy.' His pal, standing near by, said quietly: 'It's wonderful. Just wonderful—that's all.'"

The most touching thing about it was the kissing of the sacred soil of their own country. It was a simple, instinctive act—not a formal ceremony. Many heroes have done it in many ages, from the time of the "much wandering Ulysses" of Greek tradition down to the present day.

The British people are calling for an election, and the Japs and Germans think that's a queer way to spend time.

In the sweet by-and-by everybody will have plenty of sugar.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 26—Type of men Mr. Truman is bringing into government is likened by some to Coolidge or Harding, and the assembling personality of his whole regime is being run into that past characteristic, especially by bewildered and confused radicals.

It is a bad simile, inaccurate and of no value except for political opposition. You cannot find the personality counterpart of this administration in the past. It is something new.

Look into the first one, John S. Snyder, head of the Jesse Jones financial empire, (not considering yet the fresh cabinet men). He is a banker brought in to handle the biggest banking business in the history of the world, the people's $46,000,- 000,000 RFC and associated lending ventures, which the radical clique wanted to place in the hands of a man who knew nothing of banking.

Nothing like Mr. Snyder happened in the Harding or Coolidge era. Why he was, not even president of the First National Bank of St. Louis from which Mr. Truman extracted him. He was a reasonably young vice-president, with no grey hair, no wrinkles, a clear round open face, genial, open-talking. In experience, appearance and every other way, he was about as far from New York banking leadership as you could get and still obtain experience and knowledge. (He did not rate Who's Who.)

First thing Mr. Snyder did also rated only an obscure paragraph from the press associations. He found six lending agencies under RFC functioning with six separate staffs, letterheads, offices, and all the costly individual paraphernalia of bureaucracies—by order of law. These agencies not only had six separate establishments in Washington, but in most of the large cities of the country also.

Mr. Snyder had his staff write a new law consolidating this absurd duplication.
The congressional banking committee introduced it. The bill passed the senate unanimously, without objection, Tuesday, and will shortly receive the same approval of the house.

Now it required no superior ability for Mr. Snyder to start out this new way. Any man with a fresh outlook and ordinary common sense might have done it, but in view of the contrary spirit prevailing in Washington for so long, his simple step stood out like a new beacon of hope. Mr.
Snyder would be a good man for secretary of treasury, and I think he will get the job.

Look into Edwin W. Pauley, Truman's leader of the Allied reparations commission, whose head is being projected into the bear's mouth in Moscow now. Pauley made a million or so in California oil, but he looks like an oil worker. His ham-hand handshake could make your teeth rattle. He is towering in height, but a rather young man as international dealers go—and a sharp oil fields trader.

No one ever saw his likes under Harding or Coolidge, where the choices for such work ran to men like Dwight Morrow, the Morgan partner, and Charlie Dawes, the biggest Chicago banker.

Mr. Pauley will step higher in this government, probably to Snyder's job if Snyder goes to treasury.

Or look again into Bob Hannegan, the new postmaster general (beginning July 1) who requires another look in view of his

DIET AND HEALTH

Seasonal Warning

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
WE HAVE all heard about the joys of the barefoot boy. But now that the warm weather is approaching, a word of warning might not be amiss. Certain kinds of worms enter the body through the feet. One type of worm that may get into the body is the hook-worm. Hookworm infestation occurs usually as a result of persons walking barefoot in contact with soil that is polluted with the worms. When worms get into the body, the condition is called infestation.

If enough of these worms are present in the body or if the person affected uses a diet which does not contain enough proteins and iron, severe anemia or lessening of the coloring in the blood will develop. If, on the other hand, not many worms are present and the diet is satisfactory, no anemia occurs.

Iron-Rich Foods
If the diet is rich in iron-containing foods and proteins, many worms may be present without anemia occurring. Other symptoms of hookworm infestation are fatigue and nervousness.

If one person in a family is found to be infested it is advisable that other members of the family be examined by the doctor to determine whether or not they also are suffering from the same condition.

In treating hookworm infestation, according to Doctor Justin Andrews of Georgia, a drug called carbon tetrachloride seems to be the most effective substance. It is given to the patient in water or milk, or in capsules. Following the administration of this drug the patient takes a saline or salty laxative.

It seems, however, that some persons are sensitive to this drug, and as a result, the liver may be severely damaged by it. Also, the drug causes the amount of bile pigment in the blood to increase which causes calcium or lime to be lost from the body.

Sugars and Calcium

This chain of events is injurious and may in part be prevented by using a diet rich in starches, sugars and calcium, and low in fat, during the time the treatment with the carbon tetrachloride is being carried out. During the period of treatment the patient also must avoid alcoholic beverages. In fact, the carbon tetrachloride treatment should not be used at all for persons who have used alcoholic beverages over a long period of time.

Another drug known as tetrachloroethylene may be substituted for the carbon tetrachloride. However, it is usually not as effective, although its use is safer if the same precautions are taken with respect to alcoholic beverages.

If the patient with hookworms is also infested with roundworms, these should be eliminated before the treatment for hookworm is begun. This is necessary because it has been found that carbon tetrachloride seems to stimulate the activity of the roundworms, and increase the number present in the intestines. This may result in a blocking of the opening through the bowel. Roundworms may be treated by using hexylresorcinol.

tary? If not what are its causes?

color blindness is hereditary. Other than this there is no information

CHAPTER ONE

A GOLDEN wedge of South American sunlight slanted downward through fabulous sheets of metal counter. Terry Arnold held up one red gloved hand to shield her eyes as she watched the baggage man swing her wardrobe suitcase onto the scales.

"Feisty-five pounds. Parr-fee," he told her. "One more slipper, she would not go!"

"One more slipper I do not need," Terry said. "I'm just a two-footed standard model."

The man's black eyes snapped, he shouted his Latin amusement as his gaze slid admiringly down her chic slimmest in the white sluit with crimson hat and bag.

"I would not say 'just standard'!" he rebuked passionately.

Terry, gathering up her check-sighs with equal passion, "How am I going to get along without this Buenos Aires blarney?"

She sauntered slowly back through the great airport, watching the scene around her with greedy eyes. Rivulets of smartly dressed people streamed endlessly through the bulky shafts of late afternoon sunlight. They drifted into tight groups, broke out again, eddied through chrome-plated doors. She glanced at the wall clock. Only four. The clipper for New York would leave Buenos Aires a little after five. She joined the crowd heading for the staircase and tea—the traditional tea on the Sky Roof.

The throng flowed along past the doors to the musical bar, the rest rooms, the main dining salon and up the wide tile staircase. Most of them were young, the men suave sophisticates, the girls beautiful, in expensive furs. Obviously Argen-tineans with smoochy, clear skin the color of cocoa, dark, laughing eyes and a rhythm both brisk and fluid to their steps.

A stab of anger went through Terry. In an hour she'd be leaving this—forever, maybe. Leaving because she'd failed. Her lips twisted in a sardonic smile. She'd been so cocky about the way she'd go home, too. Terry Arnold, brilliant novelist —first writer to catch the true picture of the estancia, the regal splendor of the far-flung estates, the cattle kingdoms that dotted the infinite stretches of pampa like rare jewels on sashcloth!

Fitz had warned her—sure. And he'd been right. It was that that rankled most. She thought bitterly of her feeble novel cleared that morning to ashes in the junky Hotel San Juan Incinerator. So exactly his predictions! Almost to the week, too!

The head waiter seated her at a table near the railing that overlooked the Rio Platte. The startling blue of Terry's eyes stared blindly at the equally staring blue of the southern sky, with its clusters of woolly, drifting clouds. She took Fitz's letter from her scarlet handbag while the waiter adjusted the bright-colored umbrella to shade her glass-topped table from the glaring wash of sunlight.

It was so maddeningly like him —that letter. Warm, casual, with undertones of sarcastic sympathy that fairly screamed, "I told you so!"

She could see him again that gray March morning at Pier 17 as he kissed her goodbye after a last exasperated explosion.

"Okay—if you must walk into the lions' den. But take it from Uncle Fitz, it'll be little Miss Daniel that gets the freeze-up this time.

If you'd only work up to it—try crashing Newport or Palm Beach society first before you take on the Argentine upper crust! You have to do it the hard way, do you?"

"The hard way for other news hacks is the easy way for me," she had cracked.

"I'll remember that in my column, kitten, when you come back."

He would, too, blast his columnist hide.

The waiter was patiently making suggestions. "Broiled pejermy with green salad, Senorita. Melon squares with raw ham—"

"No!" Terry said violently. "Trying to remind me of ham-and-eggs Fitz Turner? I want a French pastry and a cup of tea. Bring two cups and we'll drink a toast to failure."

From the far corner of the roof rose strains of rhumba music. The tinkle of laughter, the murmur of French and Spanish accents, the metallic ring of glasses and silverware was broken periodically by the deafening roar of powerful engines, as each giant silver craft skipped down the river, then gracefully took to the air. Terry's eyes brooded over the scene. Enchanting, tantalizing, enigmatic Argentina, farewell . . .

The smile of the three alert-eyed Latinas at the next table roused her from her musing. Had her lips moved? Apparently so. For, after a moment of polite alteration, one of them approached her while the other two beamed.

"A thousand pardons, Senorita."

He bowed over her hand. "I am from La Nacion. Don de Vera. I would be honored to have a statement from you for our paper."

Terry took a long breath, slowly saw red. This was Fitz's work.
Anything for a rib!

But when she accused them of being friends of the Norte American columnist, Fitz Turner, all three, now at the table, denied it volubly, and De Vera produced a newspaper clipping as explanation of their intrusion.

Terry relaxed, as she looked at it.
It was of a girl standing beside her plane in Palm Beach—a girl wearing a white sluit with upswep blond hair. A "Miss Almsworth of Boston, winging southward next week to attend the classic turf event at Buenos Aires' Palermo Park."

"Sorry I'm not your heiress," she laughed, handing it back. "My name is Terry Arnold and I'm not 'winging in' today. I'm LEAVING —on the 5 o'clock plane for New York."

The newsmen withdrew in a furry of chagrined apologies and Terry turned to her pastry and tea, feeling even lower than before. This Almsworth girl, she reflected bitterly, would undoubtedly win enough at this famed race to keep Terry in Buenos Aires for six months, maybe meet some people and get her book done. If she only had a tempting self-discipline. Too late. She was already too exhilarated to think.

"Is there anything the Senorita wishes?"

She opened her eyes and drew a labored breath. "I want a full guy," she said quietly. "It might as well be Fate. See that swinging door?
Well, if a woman comes through next, I go home, but if it's a man, I stay, see?"

"SI," murmured the befuddled man. But he was willing to help.
Terry shut her eyes again, and after her heart had trip-hammered a dozen times or so, she heard him draw. "There, Senorita!"

Slowly she opened her eyes and looked toward the door.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

MAKE A NOVICE A STAR

CAN YOU remember the first time you ever made a real "end play," as most veterans call the maneuver? Wasn't it a thrill when you finally threw an opponent into the lead and made him come back to you with something which would assure your contract? We saw a young fellow make his first one the other day. A double by the player at his left warned him of his danger and made him sure that certain high cards were in that hand. As a consequence, he proceeded to figure out how to protect himself against them.

♠ K Q
♥ A K 9 4

♣ A J 2

♠ 7 6 4

♦ Q J 4

nerable.)

North, a very experienced player, deliberately raised his partner's suit with a jump, and as equally deliberately left in the double of the diamond slam when able to take out safely into No Trumps.

because he wanted to see how his youthful friend would handle the situation. And the kid came through like a trooper, with North kibitzing him.

West led his heart J. The Q won, and the diamond 10 was led, covered by the J and won by the K.
With a diamond trick now assured to the defenders, South could not afford a club loser. The young doctor prescribed the right medicine —a lead-throwing end-play.

He led the spade Q to the A, made a marked finesse of the club J, led to the diamond A, finessed the heart 9, scored the heart A and K for club discards, put a club on the spade K, then led the diamond 5 to West's Q.

In the dummy now remained the diamond 6 and the club A-2, in South's hand the diamond 9 and the club Q-7. West, with the club K-9 and the spade 7, was licked.
A spade lead would have enabled South to ruff in dummy and discard his club 7. So West led the club 9, hoping East had the Q, but he didn't and the contract was made.

Scouth said he owed the play to remembering one sentence in
"Learn Bridge Fast," this one:
"The preliminary stripping is as important as the ultimate play itself."

Goal of Borneo Invasion
It's Crude Rubber Supply

Guam First-Class Base Is Objective of Navy's Men

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Several members of Congress have expressed the belief that the Allied military invasion of Borneo is for the purpose of obtaining a larger supply of crude rubber for the United States war machine.

Otherwise, it is urged, the operation would have no particular military value.

Charles P. Taft, who is in charge of several important economic problems in the state department, said that the present supply of rubber is the most critical shortage now facing the nation. He declared that, with an additional 100,000 tons of crude rubber, the United States could increase its tire production 20 per cent with its present manpower.

On Jan. 1, he pointed out, crude rubber stocks had dropped to 60,000 tons, which was 40 per cent below the 100,000-ton supply specified by the Baruch report on rubber as the absolute minimum for safe operation of American industries. Improvement of synthetic rubber, Taft declared, has not reached a point where military tires can be made from it exclusively. It is necessary, he pointed out, to mix crude with synthetic in the manufacture of such tires.

CHS Juniors Hosts To Seniors At Annual Prom

Outstanding Social Event Held In Memorial Hall

The outstanding social event of the season for the seniors of Circleville high school, the Junior-Senior prom, held Friday night in the auditorium at Memorial Hall, measured up to expectations.

For the occasion the auditorium was admirably to the ideas of the members of the decorating committee who transformed it into a very beautiful setting for a gala affair. The numerals 45 made of white peonies standing out on a background of red formed the center piece at the base of the stage and around which dancing was enjoyed to the music of Mac Toolill's orchestra from Columbus. The orchestra was composed of seven pieces with a girl vocalist and was thoroughly enjoyed by the dancers.

The stage on which the orchestra was seated was decorated to represent a shell with red and white predominating in the decorations. Peonies in large baskets were used in profusion around the stage and the dance floor. The space reserved for dancing was separated from the dining floor by a lattice work of red and white streamers with an arch way on each side and one in the middle of the floor. The tables at which the guests were served light refreshments were placed along the back of the auditorium and each table was decorated in red and white streamers and bouquets of peonies. A tall lighted candle also stood at each end of the tables.

It was a scene that each member of the class will store away to be recalled in the years to come. The formal dress of the girls under the soft light added charm to the scene.

The members of the Junior class were gracious hosts for the evening.

Members of the decorating committee who worked diligently to produce the setting were Ruth Cunningham, Leah Jean Mason, Wilson Clark, Jim Lytle and Eugene Richardson.

Mary K. Morgan, Eileen Maynard, Evelyn Lutz, Ann Curtin, Earl Weaver and Marjorie Frances composed the refreshment committee and the entertainment committee was composed of Emily Lutz, Jack Miller, Earl Palm, Anna Marie Workman and Charlene Lee Stinson.

All members of the faculty were guests at the affair at which 150 were present.

Edward Heath is president of the Senior class; Warden Skinner, vice president; Ruth Workman, secretary, and David Walters, treasurer. Miss Margaret Mattinson was class advisor.

Officers of the Junior class are Wilson Clark, president; Jack Hennis, vice president; Mary Katherine Morgan, secretary-treasurer, and Fred Watts, advisor.

Returned Exiles and Their Work

In the reign of the Persian king, Cyrus, he made a decree that all Jews in captivity who wished could go to Jerusalem and rebuild the temple; the treasurer was ordered to bring out the temple treasures that Nebuchadnezzar had taken and give them to the Israelites.

When the temple was finally finished, Ezra, the high priest, discovered that many of the Jews had married pagan women, and he was so disturbed by this that he rent his robe, and falling upon his knees, he prayed that God would forgive the sins of his people.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Ezra, Nehemiah

By Alfred J. Buescher

Nehemiah, a Jew, was cupbearer to the then king of Persia, Artaxerxes; the king noticed that Nehemiah was sad and questioned him, so Nehemiah told the king of the ruins of Jerusalem and asked for leave of absence to go to Jerusalem and rebuild the walls of the city.

The Hebrews who went to Jerusalem with Nehemiah went to work with a will to build the walls and gates of the burned and ruined city. But they had many enemies, so half of them were armed and watched the others build.

It was Hannegan who brought Pauley in here as treasurer of the Democratic National Committee for Roosevelt. They all are of the same stripe, Snyder, Pauley, and Hannegan, aggressive, untired, sharp men from the middle class, hard-knocked, experienced, knowing, earnest.

Hannegan certainly knows more of inside Washington than anyone who has been around here in a long time, including Mr. Roosevelt himself.

Or consider Charles Ross, the new press secretary. His distinction is not that he is an experienced news-man. There are many of those around Washington. But among those available for the job, he, more than any other, had a reputation for honesty and equal justice among his colleagues.

The mention of his name means to everyone a square deal at the White House and an even break.

He had to sacrifice to take the position, but he owed it to Truman, an old friend, to bring his character into the front for the new regime.

The one characteristic these men have in common is that they want to give good government. I do not know whether they can, but they want to. I am inclined to think they may succeed to unexpected proportions because their minds are not distorted by ideologies which might lead them to foolish decisions.

They are not reactionary or even conservative. They are liberals, but they do not want to fight, hate, and kill everyone who does not agree with them on every subject.

Mr. Hannegan, I would hesitate to classify as an altruist. I believe he thinks he can make good government pay, politically. For instance, Mr. Truman said, when asked about a financial policy the other day, that he had to think first about the interests of the 85,000,000 bondholders in this nation.

This was the first time any official hereabouts ever mentioned their interests as dominant. The remark just slipped out of his mind earnestly; it had not been prepared in advance.

Mr. Roosevelt last time whipped up a successful appeal for only 25,600,000 votes in the midst of war. If the Truman-Hannegan appeal is laid to the genuine interests of 85,000,000 votes—the citizens who bought the war bonds as an investment in their country to pay for the war—I suspect it will become politically popular.
